I'm Stefano and the name of my "imaginary" band is Lama Keeper, inspired by the town where I live, "Lama", a small province in the south of Italy overlooking a beautiful sea, where I grew up and to which I am very attached, which is why I feel it's a keeper!

I don't have much to say about my musical journey... I'm a creative, I've been writing songs and demos practically since I was taught music in elementary school. At 16, after seeing Nirvana's Unplugged, I wanted to play and write songs like that... so I started buying instruments and equipment to make my own music.

Over the years I became passionate about many genres of rock, from the grunge of the Seattle groups to the trash metal of Slayer and Metallica, obviously passing through the punk of Green Day and Offspring. So my songs are always a mix of these musical genres and the music I have in my head, mixed with my life experiences: friendships, love, pain, anger and desire for redemption; the right basis to bring out a badass and energetic rock!

The album is called "Always Possible", just like the certainty that anything can always happen, as well as the lightning on a clear day depicted on the cover.
